

ROUMANIAN TROPHY

The Roumanian Trophy is a large (about 18" high), ornate silver trophy. The trophy, manufactured in France, was presented to the winning American Expeditionary Force rifle team at the Inter-Allied Rifle and Pistol Competitions in Le Mans, France, in 1919. The Roumanian government, for which the trophy is named, requested that it be used for competition among teams representing the various United States armed forces. In 1921, General John Pershing presented the trophy to the NRA with the request that teams representing the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps compete for the cup every year.

This trophy is awarded annually. in the NRA High Power Long Range Championship team matches.
